Integrate Video Transcript with Genevieve

okay, so this call, this class is called Integrate. So, um, you've already done some work so far with Hagen. You've had a lot of training on different subject. So today the point of this is to kind of. Integrated together, um, regarding the feminine and masculine energies. Uh, this sound very vague, but we'll go into it.

Did you watch, uh, Hagen's, uh, training on that in the, the previous, um, programs, artist ways? Did you watch that? Her integrate sessions? It's on their website anyway. Suppose if you've seen it, you'll recognize the field website. I'm just gonna cover like a bit of a, uh, sum up of that and, uh, I'll go further with this.

So. Uh, and who am I? Uh, I'm Jev. I'm a, uh, massage therapist. I've been a massage therapist for 18 years now. So I've treated thousands of people over the years, and I'm someone who, uh, really practice what I preach regarding to health and, uh, being in shape and being a healthy, and the advice I give people is always something I apply to.

Uh, so I have that kind of integrity. I don't like to, I'm not the type to say, uh, do as I say, not as I do. Like if I say some things, it's 'cause I, I do it, or I, I at least tried it for me. Um, and yeah, I basically apply a, a very healthy lifestyle, uh, practice, uh, Chinese medicine principles. So if you're familiar with that, it's really about, um.

Prevention and balancing out everything so that your, your whole systems can work together harmoniously. Um, so that's what I do and that's why I'm here. So I've done, uh, Hagen programs a couple years ago and she hired me to cover the physical aspect of it. 'cause you can do all the mental, emotional, spiritual work, um, but you have to include your, your body in this 'cause you're in a physical body.

So it's part of the deal. And there's also really smart ways you can hack into your body, into what it says to you to actually, uh, unlock your next, uh, breakthroughs. So just like any other tools that, uh, features teaches, um, this is one of them. And again, really bring, uh, bring in good results. So a good saying in Chinese medicine is if it doesn't go through the mind go through the body and vice versa.

So it's like sometimes you have a pain somewhere and you're able to go to the source of it mentally, emotionally, and it disappears. And sometimes, like you're stuck mentally somewhere. You go move, you go do a workout or you go take a nap and it, it unlocks after that. So they really work together. It's the same thing.

Um, so if you've done that integrate class on the site, uh, this will look familiar. That was her. Um, so the, the three sacred laws to, uh, to integration. So first it's always something we come back to. What are your goals? Uh, 'cause when you don't have any goals in mind, like why would you do what you do? You know?

So it's like when you're focused on your goals, when you're, oh, that's what I'm doing this for. It helps you orient your actions all the time. Um, so yeah, being connected to your goals is the basis. Then after that, uh, the sacred law number two is vibration or magnetism. It's like when you align your mind and your heart, really, that's when things flow.

Uh, if you're always only using your mind, but your heart is not in it, it's gonna have limited results. If you only bring your heart and there's no structure of your mind helping you, it, it could be messy or just unproductive. So you really want them both to be aligned in whatever you choose to do. Um, so being very intentional in where you place your energy, where you place your attention, that will bring you, uh, more results.

And then sacred Law number three, uh, quoted her As you elevate, you tolerate less bullshit. And that goes in any area of your life. Uh, if you have one area of expertise, you know that when you really know your stuff, you don't tolerate people's bullshit about it when you know they don't know what they're talking about.

So it's the same for everything. So, um, when you know when you're good in your relationship, other people can have opinions. You are like, you don't listen to them because you know what you know. And, uh, so stuff like that. So you tolerate less bullshit, you tolerate less excuses. So again, if we come back to the, the, the subject of being healthy or being fit, uh, like.

Once you, you, you've reached a certain level of feeling good in your body and moving towards your objectives. You don't tolerate excuses anymore, yours or other people's. Like, it's not your job to convince other people to, to do whatever you do, but it's like you just, you just know that this is not, um, like their excuses are just that they're just excuses.

So you don't entertain them and you don't enable them. Like you can offer something else, but um, yeah, you don't tolerate bullshit. So, um, so this whole thing of masculine versus feminine energy, there's a lot about that, uh, online, a lot of different interpretations. Um, and specifically around the area of relationships.

'cause your cohort specifically, it's, uh, centered around relationships, um, and dating and stuff. Which we'll, we'll talk about. Um, but again, it's inside, like the whole picture of who you are being in your life will translate in other aspects. There is differences. Like some people can really be on top of their game at work and in their training schedule or with their kids, whatever, and suddenly love relationships.

They're a mess. 'cause as you see, we also have different, you know, planet placements. Uh, all karmic stuff like stuff we, our blueprint, which makes us better at certain things and not at others. But the good thing is once you have access to good information, you can really, you can learn whatever you want to learn.

It comes back to being clear about your goals. So if it's a goal for you to become better at relationships, you can start learning the, the tools to be better at relationships. So to come back to, um, the masculine versus feminine. So, yeah, there's a lot of stuff online, like dating coach saying, oh, if you're a woman, like don't be more and you're feminine.

So don't like, let the guy lead, let him do his thing, and you just wait. Kind of this, giving this idea that you have to be this passive. I really see the image of, you know, of 1950s wife, you're not supposed to have a personality. You're not supposed to have, you know, needs and desires. You're just supposed to be waiting pretty at home that your husbands tell you what to do.

It's like, come on, really? Um, so it's not about that. Like yes, being feminine, being in the feminine energy. Uh, and again, as you know, men and women have both. But the feminine energy itself, yes, it's more, uh, it's more receptive, it's more intuitive, it's more, um, about going with the flow. Uh, and it's a lot about what feels good.

So the question, what feels good for me in this moment is very feminine, is very, 'cause when you ask that you need to start being present to what would feel good. So then you start listening to yourself better, to your body or to your thoughts like, huh, what would feel good right now? And the answer doesn't always come right away, but it's a question that brings you into a feminine state of being receptive to what you're gonna find as an answer.

Uh, so yeah, so that feminine is really that state and the masculine is more about, okay, once I've established what would feel good, right now masculine is about let's make it happen. So what actions can take me there? So the, the masculine is more about, yeah, action making things work, uh, bring structure.

So that's, uh, the big side. So again. Uh, Hagen, uh, slides. If you've done a course, you, you remember those? If you haven't, here's, uh, here's a slide. So the feminine, uh, basically it's all about feeling, uh, daydreaming, intuition, nurturing, being fluid, uh, receptivity, uh, all the nuance, the grays, the colors, uh, being holistic, so caring about the whole, uh, being in five D.

So more about planning and imagining, like picturing how it would be. Um, and the masculine is more by thinking, uh, tricking, strategizing, structuring. Um, it's about protection. It's logical, it's clear, it's assertive. It, it, it aims to execute. Uh, it can be competitive, sometimes aggressive. Uh, it can be black and white.

Like it's either yes or no. It's this or that. Um, it's very much in the 3D like what can be done like concretely. So that's very much the masculine. So again, there's not one sign that's better than the other. They, they complete each other, they compliment each other. And too much of one creates certain problems.

Too much of the other creates certain other problems. Thing is we live in the mostly masculine society, uh, or masculine energy society. So what ha we have learned that is more valued is more the masculine stuff. 'cause then it's concrete. We can see it, we can feel it, we can touch it, it's real. Um, so we, we've learned that, oh, we need to go more often there, uh, if we wanna first be taken seriously, um, and just making stuff happen.

Um, but it creates other types of issues like, um. Like, yeah, it brings more competitiveness, selfishness, uh, not caring about impacts on others. Uh, that's a downside to it versus a feminine, like, uh, which is more about the others. If it was only feminine, not a lot would get done. Like, yes, there would be a lot of caring and nurturing and stuff, but when it came, when it comes time to actually do shit, it would be, it would lack.

So it's really like we really need both equally. Um, and it's just about from there, it's each, each of us to determine, um, am I too much on one side or the other in a certain area. So that's pretty much what, what we're gonna dive into. Um, so yeah, a bit more about, uh, feminine and masculine. Interesting one, visualizing, daydreaming, sensitive to impacts, uh, and to risks.

So, uh, women are generally, uh, less. Um, prone to take risks like in business. So they'll be more, they'll have more stability and a little less like big growth men, it's the opposite. They can have a lot of big growths, but they can also crash, uh, more often 'cause they, they're. Too much, too much of risk takers.

So sometimes, so again, one is not better, it's just different results. Um, the woman is more able to pivot and adapt when something comes up. It's like, oh, 'cause she thought about everything. She thought about every possible risk, every possible, uh, thing that could happen. So then when something shift, she's all, she's ready, you know?

Um, and believing before seeing like you have an idea, she can be, oh, yeah, okay, I can see that. Like, versus men, when the Hagen was saying she was meeting, uh, CEOs and stuff, uh, saying like, men, they wanna see the data. Even if the thing doesn't exist yet. They wanna see data about it. They wanna see proof that it will work, uh, before it even exists.

So that's the, the other side. And they're more about, yeah, initiating, planning, executing. That's their strength. Like, okay, you wanna do this? Okay, perfect. Bang, bang, bang. We'll do it this way. So that's the Mac masculine energy. And a lot of women are really good at that, and a lot of men are really good at.

Uh, the feminism. So what do we do with that? So, um, certain questions you can ask yourself. Uh, where do you fall on the spectrum of masculine, feminine? And then you look into different areas of your life. So where do you fall on in at work? Like, are you more in your masculine or are you more in your feminine?

It can depend on what type of work you do, but even then it can be really like the type of person you are at work versus the type of person you are at home can be completely different. And at the same time in relationships, like if you bring like the type of person you are at work, if you bring that in your relationship, it probably won't work.

It can some, you know, some type A couples that you can have in a, an image of like, they're both super driven, da, da, da, da all the time. It can't work for them, you know? But, uh, ideally a relationship can have more of a, a flow to it and a partnership to it that, yeah, you still get stuff done, but there's also space for, uh, intimacy and chill time and, you know, I improvising and playing and having fun.

'cause if you're not having fun in your relationship, what are you doing there? Seriously? Um, and then after asking yourself those questions, like, how can you balance your masculine and feminine in these areas? And sometimes like at work, maybe it's fine. Maybe the, the, the type of energy you have there, it's perfect.

You don't have to touch anything. It works. And at times it can be necessary to adjust like. I think the more society evolves, the more people get more in touch with that kind of work that we do. Um, the more like good leaders will be as like a good balance of feminine masculine. 'cause they'll know how to do things, they'll know how to execute, but they're also very good at listening to the needs of the people they serve.

Um, 'cause we, we all have examples of what happens when they don't do that. Like this, this hierarchy. In, in, in the corporate world, we've seen a lot of that and people are just sick of it. So it's still very present, but more and more people are like, fuck that. That's not a life like, feeling like shit all day, all week.

Um, and yeah, and having a boss that doesn't care about the. The fact I have a life or sometimes I'm, I'm sick. Like, no, I'm just gonna, I'm not gonna spend my life there. Um, so yeah, that kind of shift in society will bring more like, it, it kind of forces people to evolve. Uh, it's like, okay, you've always done things a certain way.

Now it doesn't work anymore. So figure it out. Yeah. Oh yeah, you, maybe you have to start to work on yourself. Oh, you'll win in the process too, so go for it. You know?

Um, so then when you, we integrate that with the body, uh, why do we do that? It's because, um, as I said, we all have feminine and masculine energy. Um, and our bodies can help us. Uh, it can give us clues in, um, when we don't know what we need. Oh, should I be more masculine there? Should I be more feminine?

Sometimes we can figure it out and sometimes the body can really help us figure it out. And it can do that by, um. By, um, the, the discomforts we feel or the, the, the pains we feel, or the injuries we have or, or sickness. All those things are just signs of something is not regulated, something is out of balance.

Something is the heart is not working harmoniously, so then it breaks down. So in that breakdown, you have your clues, you have your next breakthrough. Um, so when you, you know what to look for, you're better at, uh, correcting and adjusting when you find it. So I'll give you a few, um, a few tricks to actually help yourself, like read into your body, listen to your body better, so then you can bring those tools everywhere you go.

Um, so yeah, so in general. Left right, or more accurately your dominant side versus versus non-dominant side. So if you're right-handed, your right side will be your dominant one. If your left-handed will be your left one and your more dominant side will be your masculine side. So more action toward oriented and your, uh, non-dominant will be more feminine and more about the flow and everything in.

Um, so then from there, when you have an issue in your body, like it's like, oh, it's your left, uh, shoulder that's injured, what does it say versus if it's your right. So you can connect those clues and be like, okay, that's what my body's trying to tell me. And when you work on it, it can help it physically, but also it helps you.

Oh, that's what I need to adjust in my life. So those are a few, um. A few things that typically, uh, speak loud, uh, when people have issues there. Um, first one, you, when you have issues in your neck, that's a very good indication that, as I said earlier, your mind and your heart are not aligned. They're not going in the same direction.

So if your heart calls you somewhere, but if you gaslight yourself and you're going in the other direction, this will create tension. Um, and you see it with people with, uh, sore throats, F chakra block. So it, f chakra is all about the expression. So it's expression of what you say, but it's basically who you are, like what you do, are you in alignment with what you're actually supposed to do?

Um, so that's a good one. The jaw, like tense jaw. We've, there's a lot of that in today's world. Um, it's very strong emotions. That's actually deep work when we work on the jaw. Um, a lot of strong, strong emotions. Uh, the sadness, grief, anger, rage, there's a lot of that in the jaw and everything. We don't say everything.

We keep it in, we hold it there. Um, like some people, it can be so intense that they can even chip a tooth like it. And teeth are your more, more solid substance or, or tissue in your body. So if a pressure is strong enough to break it, it's, it's, it's concerning. Um, the shoulders in English, it's, it works in French, it doesn't, but in English, it's a good way to remember it.

It's all the shoulds. So all the, the, the rules you've, um. Assimilated in your life. Like all the things you, you you're supposed to do, you think you should do that? People told you you should do. All the shoulds, stay stuck in the shoulders. It's about perfectionism, but it's a perfection perfectionism that, that, that's rigid, that's not fully yours.

Even if you assimilated it, it's not yours. You, you picked it up somewhere. And um, so because of that, it creates tension in your body. 'cause your body's like, the fuck is this? It's just like fighting it constantly. Um, so it's also connected to being on guard, being like feeling unsafe from people, like looking at you and judging you and maybe push, punishing you, you know?

Um, your back in general, your back is connected to, to the past of course, but it's life slowed. Like you have a lot on your, on your back. It's the past. It's, uh, relational attachments, often connected to family stuff in the back, uh, specifically the lower back. Uh, when you think of the first two chakras, which are about, um, safety, feeling safe and being connected to your needs.

Um, the lower back is really about feeling insecure. So either insecure relationally or materially. Um, so, uh, that's a thing to look at when you have lower back issues. Like, oh, okay, do I feel, do I feel safe in my situation right now? And if not, what, what can I do to to change that? Um, your hips, if you have hip issues, uh, the, the direction you take in life.

Like, are you going where you wanna go, where you're called to go, or are you either resist or you're stagnating and you're, you're not moving. So then again, it creates internal tension that can create hip issues. Uh, your feet, ankles, uh, it's all around like trusting yourself to be solid on your own two feet.

Like, this is where I am, this is my square, and I'm, I'm solid about this. Versus being, uh, not sure, uh, and also being solid when you have to shift directions like your, your ankles can take it versus some people they always twist their ankle like all the time, so they're never fully solid. So it's either, and it's not when they're standing still, it's when they're moving.

So there's something about, uh, there's a, a mistrust there, uh, or fragility. So those are some easy to, to work with clues. You can find other charts like this one. If you wanna take a screenshot, uh, it's a good one to work with. Uh, you can really look at which, uh, like if you have an eye problem or a, uh, elbow problem, you can look at these clues and be like, oh, what could it be connected to?

And again, it's, it's regular, it's general charts just like, just like, um, tarot cards, you know, they have certain meanings, but you have to take the meaning inside the context of where you are right now when you do the, the draw. So when you're looking, okay, what's happening in my life? What could be connected to?

And then it's, there's more chance it's gonna be accurate. 'cause sometimes you're like, it's not exactly that, but I see where we're going. And then you go from there and you figure out your own stuff, you know? Um, if you want, we could take. A few minutes to look at that later. Like, we'll, we can have sometimes to, for you to use this right now.

And, uh, we can do maybe a couple examples. I'll get back to it. Uh, I'll give you the homework you're gonna have right away. So that's a tool that's gonna be for you. You can screenshot it again. So type of homework is, um, what's your relationship with your body and health? So, um, so what's your relationship with food?

So all about what you eat, but also how, uh, like are you the type who, who's like, oh. Eating is a waste of time. So you're always eating super fast, standing up or at your desk, and it's kind of a, it's an annoyance. You have to keep doing this will give you different results in your body, the way you assimilate food versus someone who's actually enjoying the food.

So again, when we come back to the masculine feminine, uh, a lot of, um, a lot of guys or, or women too who are very into like bodybuilding and being super like rigid about everything they do and don't do. They have this big thing, they, they, they follow through the letter. Like there's not a lot of enjoyment in there.

So it's like, yeah, it can bring results, but to a certain degree. 'cause there's something about if you bring some feminine energy into it first you can. Um, well, the feminine energy, it's all, again, it's all about pleasure. So when you experience pleasure, when you eat something, the cascade of, uh, hormones and, uh, proteins and stuff in your body that happens are different than when you eat something you don't like or you don't enjoy, or it's just a chore you have to do.

You're not in the st the same state of mind. So your body doesn't assimilate it the same way. So in the same sense, like if you have a belief that, oh, if I eat this, I'm gonna be, I'm gonna become, I don't know, uh, it's gonna make me lethargic, or it's gonna be like, yes, food is a fuel and you wanna be smart about it and use it to, um, give you the, the, the, the best energy possible, but you really wanna bring into it the, the pleasure aspect of it.

It's also very important. Um, I was often telling clients like, uh, it's often women or. Checking what they eat too much. Like, oh, I really don't wanna eat that cake. But then, uh, I feel bad like that. Like if you wanna eat that cake, if you eat it, enjoy it. If you're going to eat it and feel guilty and feel like shit after it, no, you shouldn't, you shouldn't eat it.

But if you're gonna go and eat it, fucking enjoy it. Really smile through it, enjoy it, take it, and trust that your body will take care of it. And again, if we come back to the principles of too much of anything becomes something else. If you eat cake every day, it's gonna create certain results. And also at some point it's not as enjoyable.

So the body is well made for that. When we're in tune with the feminine energy, it's really about, okay, what would feel good now? So that's another practice in, it's probably in there, but your relationship to food, if you and, uh, bring in the integration of masculine, fem, and feminine energy, the feminine aspect will be too.

Okay, what do I feel like eating right now? What would feel good right now? What would be good right now? And then the masculine would be like, okay, I'll get that, or I'll make that. So, but the, the, the practice of even if you had your menu set up before, it's like, okay, in the moment, okay, what would feel right?

You can still go according to your menu if you have a, a certain structure around that, but maybe like replace, oh, I would feel more for this vegetable instead of this one. Listen to that, go for that. So it's really about com combining the two. And again, if you're someone who's always in the feminine side of that and you're always indulging and you're always like, I'll just go with the flow.

And it, like, it creates all the results. But when you really bring in the two, like you have your goals, like regarding your health or your, your physical fitness, and then you bring in both masculine feminine, so you bring your structure and you bring the, the feel good part of it. It just makes everything so much easier.

And little side piece about, uh, women with our, with our cycles too, uh, at different moments in our cycles, we need like more iron. 'cause we lose, we lose some blood. So it's normal, for example, to, to crave if you're somebody, somebody who eats meat is normal to crave red meat when you have your period. So it's, uh, it's those kinds of clues.

Often it's more subtle, but it's like you wanna practice listening to that. And you also wanna be aware if you have some food addictions. That's why I put addictions, uh, at the end there. Uh, 'cause food addictions will make you of course, want to eat that again. So if you fall into like, oh, well that's my body wants, that's what it needs.

Not necessarily like the, the, the obvious, uh, more obvious, uh, thing about, that's like cigarettes. Like cigarettes is never good for you. You still crave it. It's an addiction. So that's you, you wanna establish like your own baseline, uh, regarding, uh, what your body needs. So then you know which signals to trust and, uh, when we'll do our one-on-ones together, we can, if you want, we can go more into the, uh, the, the, the, the, the process of the microbiome.

'cause that's a really good way to, uh, cut food addictions. Uh, when you know how it works, like mentally, it's easier to keep the discipline, the discipline needed to change habits. 'cause it takes, it takes time. It takes effort in the beginning mostly, but when you know how it works, uh, it's easier to go through it.

So that's when we do our, our one-on-one, we, we can have more time for that. Um, so again, next, uh, what's your relationship with exercise? Sports play? Again, if you're only in your masculine, it's gonna be like, okay, you do your, your workout always the same way. And like, yes, you'll get results, but maybe you'll.

Wake up one day, you fucking hate it and you never do it again. Um, an interesting part of, of, uh, the trends of exercise, like, you know, Pilates, like, it's pretty much only women who do that. It's a very masculine way to exercise. 'cause it's, it's very structured, it's very square, it's very like, precise and about results.

So it's very masculine actually. And I work in the gym and I, I see women who go to Pilates classes. Like, they, not all of them generalizing, but often there's this rigidity like, yes, their body looks look great, like they look super fit, but there's this kind of tension of they're not really enjoying it.

It's just, and it's normal to not fully enjoy a workout while you're working out. 'cause it's hard. Uh, but there's a thing about being too rigid about it. That's like, for me, like the, the ideal, um. The ideal exercise or sports that integrates both. And there's probably other examples, but I didn't think about it.

But it's dancing like to, to be a good dancer, you need the masculine energy of, you know, practicing and having the discipline to practice the moves and build the muscles to be able to do the moves. And, but you also need the feminine 'cause if you're a dancer who only works like rigid, it's not fun, it's not, uh, enjoyable to watch either.

But when you bring both, like you have the discipline that brought you to the, the fact you're able to do those moves, but then when it's time to dance, you go with the flow and you really, so that's a, a good example of, uh, bringing in both. And I'm sure like when you, when you see amazing athletes in any type of sport, I'm thinking like tennis or gymnastics or whatever, even even football, like with the new players or like, they're not fully playing with the rules.

They're, they, they have their own style and that's the thing they bring, play into it. Play is very feminine 'cause it's very spontaneous, intuitive. Uh, it's playful. So it's about fun. So when you bring play with discipline, that's when you become an exceptional athlete. Um, others. So I'll let you go through it, but yeah, relationship with sleep.

How's your sleep schedule, which is very important, uh, for overall health and energy. Um, your stress management, your environment. I included your environment. 'cause also, again, about bringing in more feminine energy, because we're often too much on the masculine, uh, in our societies. Um, like even if you're in a home, that's not necessarily your, your dream home.

Um, just look around and, and look like, okay, what could I, how could I make, make it more. Enjoyable. Like either adding some arts or chain moving things around, or if you practice your, your feng shui, like when you look at your feng shui, you know, it's, it's, it's sharp. You're like, yeah, you look at it and you feel good.

So things like that, that, that make you feel good more often, that feeds your feminine energy and that feeds the good hormones and your transmitters in your body so that that promotes, uh, a healthier body. So it's all for that. So everything's important. Um, another thing you can look at for things around your, your body, what emotions do you experience the most?

The least? Um, again, in this, like often with men, the only emotionally no to express is anger. And it's not their fault. It's because they've been taught that it's the only acceptable emotion for them to show. So, uh, they can be like, well. I only have neutral or angry. Well, it, it, when we dig in there, we know under, there's grief, there's sadness, there's disappointment, embarrassment, uh, humiliation.

There's a lot of stuff in the airport. So you wanna look at what are the emotions that I experience regularly. Um, the most least some I never experienced. Just starting to inquire in this. 'cause again, when we come back to the, the holistic aspect of the body, you want a bit of everything circulating all the time.

Like you don't have to change, like your whole personality suddenly like to feel joyful all the time. 'cause also feel joyful all the time. It brings other types of issues. It it, yeah. The d Lulu world. Um, so it's in Chinese medicine, you want balance of everything. Like everything has its place. Everything has its purpose.

So it's about, yeah. Do you only feel. Only certain emotions all the time, that can translate into certain types of issues in the body. Um, yeah. So and at the end, yeah, level of vitality, what addictions you have, if any, again, any type of, um. Uh, of addiction, uh, coming back to the masculine and feminine in the types of issues you can have in your body.

Another clue, like I said, it's like, yes, the body part, but also what is the issue. For example, if you're someone who always has, um, tension headaches or tendonitis or even fractures like this really shows that it's a matter of too much force, too much tension, too much of something constantly that creates inflammation or even breakage or, and tension versus if you're someone who, um, is, is experiencing more like stagnation and you don't feel like moving and you, you, yeah, you're low energy, you're like, then it, it speaks to more, uh, a more, uh, dysregulated.

Too much into feminine, uh, and you lack drive, you lack discipline to go into action. So then the recipe for one, will be the opposite of the recipe For others, the one who's always has tension, headaches and, and tendonitis, they need to chill and they need maybe help to help them chill. And the person's more stagnation and no will and stuff.

They need to kick themselves in the app. They need to, they need to bring in more movement, more structure, more drive to move. And movement is the cure to stagnation. So that's all the clues that you can use to, um, to adjust when you have something. So, and then the practice for that is, uh, yeah, scanning your body present to it.

You ask yourself, do I need more structure or more flow here? And it's just the practice of that. And I, I bring this question again. 'cause then. Come back. Coming back to the, the dating world and the relational world, when you have that practice with yourself of, you know, getting in touch with your body, getting in touch with how you feel, what you need in this moment, when you have that practice in with yourself, then it's easier to apply that once you're in a relationship.

Like it's easier to, to ride a bike when you already know how to ride a bike versus you jump on it for the first time and you're on the road. Like it's good to practice it and then you can apply it or you, you're with someone like it, it's a first or second date. You get in touch with, how does this feel being with this person?

Does it feel natural and easy and at the same time, exciting? These are all good signs? Or does it feel like, uh, I feel like I'm, like, I'm being judged and I'm being like assessed, like, uh, and it's uncomfortable, or I just feel this is, this is wrong for me. And it's, and sometimes the, the, the, the feminine side, because it's very, uh, intuitive and about feeling, sometimes you get a feeling and you can't exactly pinpoint what it is, or you, you can't explain it or describe it to someone.

But the good thing is, is the feminine. You don't have to explain it. It's just no. You just, you just feel what it is. You know yourself because you've practiced it before. You're like, I know that this feeling is a sign for me, that this doesn't work for me. And you're like, okay, bye. And you don't waste your time or someone, uh.

Says, oh, well, uh, you're not for me. I said, okay. The feminine is all about, okay, that's, that's what it is. Okay, fine. You don't try to convince someone to choose you. You don't try to, uh, work harder to prove that they should choose you, whatever. 'cause this is actually feminine. Uh, this is actually masculine, sorry, like wanting to prove your point and push to prove something and convince that's a very masculine energy.

That's why even if you're a woman dating, and when you do that, you use like seemingly feminine tools like the seduction and uh, people pleasing and uh, preparing little things for him or things to do. Like the background of it is actually masculine. 'cause you are very goal oriented and you have something in mind that you want to achieve versus the feminine is more like whatever happens that feels good.

That's what I'm going for. So that's, that's a nuance. So the feminine in dating is all about you try things out, you see how you feel, you feel, you see if it feel feels right for you sometimes, oh, I think it feels right for me. Oh, he says, no. Okay, you let go and you move on. So it's a, it's another type of practice.

So, but just keep in mind when you're trying to convince you're in your masculine, when you're trying to prove something, you're in masculine. And on the other side, when you're a guy, if you're a guy dating, uh, women, um, you wanna bring in structure, you wanna be clear. So again, you use your feminine energy to, to as.

To, um, establish for yourself, what do I want in a relationship? What kind of relationship do I want? Do I want someone, uh, who I will live with and spend most of my time with and will, uh, do things? Or do I want something more like, let's see each other three times a week, not live together, at least not at the beginning or ever.

Like, whatever it is for you. What type of relationship you want. Do you want something monogamous? Do you want something poly? Do you want, and your job is to, and again, it's the same with women. You, if you're, when you're clear about that, when you're clear about what you want and what you don't want, you arrive with this in meeting the other person.

And the masculine aspect of you will be like, okay, this is what I'm looking for. This is what I want. Does that work for you? Yes or no? And the per person answers. If it's a no, you let go. That's your feminine. Be like, okay, bye. And. If it's a yes, then the, the, the other type of work starts. It's like once you're in a relationship together, it's always the same thing.

It's always this, how do I feel right now? What do I need to bring once I've, uh, identified it, the masculine takes into make it happen. So do I need to communicate something? Do I need to do something myself? Do I need to, whatever it is. But it's always to come back to, uh, align both together. Like starting by, like assessing what do I need right now?

What feels good right now and feels good. It's not always like, ah, it's just like, what, what feels right right now in this situation? And then you establish, do I need to communicate something? Do something, share about something, plan something that's a masculine, working with the feminine to make this relationship work.

And then you offer that space to your partner to do the same like you led them. Really take the time to assess for themself what feels good for them in a moment and express if they have to, what they they wanna do about it. And then you work together and it's just that over and over. And you see if you have a good partner when you do that.

And if not, you're okay. I'm saying, okay, like this. 'cause of course, easier said than done, but if it's not that you, you let go of that partnership. 'cause if clearly it's not working when you apply all this, well, it's just not the person you should be with. If you're in a relationship where you always have to ugh, fight and like it's always blocked by something, it's always hard work to do something or it's always like, ugh, clearly it's all signs that this first, this doesn't feel good.

And also you, you don't get much done. And it's just so like why continue? Like, and the feminine be like, ah, this sucks. Bye. So, um, and the, and the masculine takes you out. So all of that. So if we, you wanna guys come back to the, um, the body charts and work with that for a bit? Who would like to work with that?

Yeah, Danielle, go for it. I feel like I hold a lot of, um, like tension, I guess like in my neck and like shoulders. Mm-hmm. So I'm not sure, I guess that I'm trying to, sorry. Um. I'm not sure. I forget what that is. So that's more, I'm trying to like zoom in. Yeah. The, the neck is connected to, well, the fifth chakra.

So your expression. Yeah. And expression is also, it's what you say, but it's also what you receive from other people, like their communication. So it's communication at large. Okay. And it's about, uh, is your head and your heart align, like you, and in that chart is, you refuse to see alternative and flexibility, anxiety, stress, lack of forgiveness.

So these are, yeah. Some other ways to look at it. The refusing to see alternatives. Sometimes it's like, yeah. When we're stubborn about something like, okay, I know it feels like I should not, but I really wanna go there and be, we're being stubborn about it. Um, and we refuse to see that there's. Another door open there, that's, that would actually be better.

That's the kind of way that the, the neck gets stiff. It's that, that 'cause when we are being stubborn, we're clearly, um, bypassing some signals that the rest of our body or, or our heart or our soul, or whatever you wanna call it, like, it's calling you too and you're ignoring it and you're like, Nope, I want this, I want this one.

Um, that can create tension in the neck. Thank you. Welcome. And the shoulders again, it's, uh, around, um, all the rules and all the shoulds, like all the, the, the external pressure that you've internalized of what you should be doing. About anything could be like what you should be doing at work, what you should be doing with your life, what you should be doing, uh, like who you should be with.

Uh, so all of that, all the shoulds. So that's a good inquiry to do. Like what are all the shoulds in my life? Yeah. And really look into them like, is it really mine? Like, do I wanna keep that or not? And if not, just let it go and you create something else. Yeah. That resonates. Thank you. You are welcome. Yes, Jack?

So I had a, I had a couple questions. Yeah. Uh, the first one is, 'cause these body parts say are associated with different emotions, feelings, things like that, um, like is working through, let's just stick with shoulders, for example. Yeah. Like if you're having like shoulder pain or whatever. Um. Then you make the connection like, Hey, I am really focused on the shoulds that have been in my life.

Um, would working through like making your shoulders better, stronger, whatever the protocol is physically, does that help you with the emotional side of things and vice versa? Am I understanding that correctly? It, it can, it can, when you do the full work of Yeah. Looking into the, the source of it and stuff.

Uh, and sometimes resolving it physically will help, uh, the mental emotional about it. But it depends how you will address that, that recovery. Like it's, it's like once you see it, you can be just like, oh, well, I'll fix my shoulder, so we'll fix everything else. Right. You have to keep doing both basically.

Okay. Yeah. And again, shoulder is wide. 'cause I know you're, you're a, a fitness guy too. Mm-hmm. Like. I, and I have the feeling that for you, it's more like the front of your shoulder. Is it like, yeah, I, I'm just like, I'm looking down this list and I'm like, yeah, this, that, the other, so like I'm, yeah. Yeah. I'm a whole pan.

So it can be more precise than that. Like it's, if it's like the shoulder, like more the, where your biceps attached, it's more connected to you be doing things, you know, we work with our arms in front of ourselves. Mm-hmm. So it can be more about initiating a project, initiating things, uh, okay. Working towards something.

The meaning can vary, you know? So it's more, it, this is really like a, a gross, uh, yeah. Some of it. I guess I was just, I was just curious about like the overarching, like the general principle. Yeah. Um, like yeah, we could get into specifics individually if we wanted to, but like, just generally like. Does working, working on the physical can help you with the mental emotional associ association with that body part?

Yeah. And vice versa. Okay. And vice working on your mental emotional can help reduce the pain too. Okay, cool. It's really both. Yeah. And it, it gets really, um, clear when, uh, you know, in, in Chinese medicine, traditional Chinese medicine, like each organ is associated with, uh, uh, different emotions. That's why at the end, the homework that I, I come back to emotions because for, for example, like anger is associated with the liver.

Um, versus frustration is more the gallbladder and anger and frustration. I have a really a distinct, uh, nature to him. So it's different, like anger will be more outward and loud. Frustration is more, uh, inside, we could say more feminine. It's more repressed. It's more like, uh, passive aggressiveness can be more in there.

Um. Yeah, so different organs will have different emotions associated and sometimes it's, yeah, you can say that to someone and like their patterns is so ingrained in so long. At first it'd be like, nah, I don't have anger issues. You can feel it from there like three miles away, but it's just, yeah, the body is good too.

The body always wants you to continue to keep going so you mm-hmm. Can actually live your life without ever looking into this. Like, you can live your life only eating junk food, like you'll survive. You'll be able to keep going. It's just when you start being interested in the quality of your life and elevating your life, then stuff like that can become interesting.

'cause it's just another tool in your toolbox to, mm-hmm. Okay, I've tried this didn't work, let me try this one today and have these different tools to apply and see where, where it unlocks that day. Sometimes it's looking at, oh, what's the trend that with the plan today? And then you get an insight and then you get unlocked.

So it's different every time. Yeah. Okay. Um, and then out outta curiosity, because I know like we're talking about the connection with the emotional and mental stuff. Is there ever just like, like for, I guess I'll just use my example and why I'm even asking, um. I quit my corporate sales job, and now I'm, I'm just a barista right now.

While I'm figuring shit out, I'm just like, I wanna go pour coffee. It's hilarious. But I'm standing all the time. I'm not used to standing like for four or five, six hours at a time. Yeah. And so like my legs are just like sore. Mm-hmm. Just because I'm not used to standing. Like, so I, I ask that, I, I say that to ask like, are sometimes these just, there's not necessarily an emotional or mental like, association with it.

It's just like a change of environment, change of lifestyle or whatever. Yeah. It's just a physical thing. Like, yeah. And nothing is absolute. And yeah, any posture you have all the time will be, will bring certain results. Like if you're sitting all day, you'll have certain issues. If you're standing all day, you'll have other issues.

Hmm. If you'd be laying all day, you'd have other issues. Um, so yeah, sometimes it's, it's, it's physical. Like it's, but again, when you stand in the, the big picture of, you know, you're the center of your universe and everything that happens. It happens because you're in your center. Mm-hmm. So you can always keep this open mind of, oh, what if, and you just look into it.

But yeah, I'm, I'm with you on that. I'm not a, a freak of, oh, you have a thing in your elbow, it means you hate your mom. Like it's, you know. Yeah, right. Okay. Using discernment and situational Yeah. Like, what's going on. But it's always an interesting clue when you, when you are always looking to, to improve.

Yeah. And yet there's a bit of too much looking to improve. Sometimes, sometimes just chill. Sometimes it's just you're having a bad day, you know? And then, yeah. But then even then you look into the masculine feminine thing. Oh, I'm just having a bad day. Ugh, okay, fine. You let go of trying to figure out who the fuck it is, and you're like, what?

Do we feel good right now? Well, I really wanna just watch a series and do nothing. Well do that and you'll feel better. Yeah. So it's, again, it's always about connecting, coming back to, ugh, what would feel good right now? What would feel right, right now? Because I'm just starting to think like, 'cause some of these things I'm like, oh, I've, these have been around with me for a while.

And so it's like, okay, like maybe these are things, but then also, like if things are starting to pop up, like, you know, it's been around for a couple weeks, but it's not a normal thing. Like, oh, it could be a, like you can learn to address whatever Yeah. In that moment. So, exactly. That's a, that's a great way to say it.

Like if it's something that is, uh, a pain or a discomfort that is very familiar to you, that's something that's been there for a long time, that's something you wanna look into. Mm-hmm. If it's something that just pop up, like you can still look, but it's like, but yeah, definitely the, the, the longevity aspect of the order, chronicity of it, that has more chance to be really speaking loudly about something.

Cool. All right. Thanks. Um, I'm just gonna look at the chat. Uh. Oh yeah, you're getting advice for your legs. That's cool. And also sometimes like cafes, they have, uh, these, um, rubber, uh, little carpets. So if you're standing on tiles, of course your legs are gonna be Yeah. You know, the day, if they can have a little rubber mattress, little rubber carpet, I can make a difference.

Someone else, we have like seven minutes left.

Um, Genevieve, we, hi. I just remember during our session that I, we discussed that I had neck and shoulder pain, but the thing is, I forgot to mention it first 'cause it was so chronic for me. Mm-hmm. And then I went, um, on a hiking trip to Spain and I was surprised that like I didn't have any neck and shoulder tension at all despite having like a backpack sometimes being hunched over with like a walking stick.

And it felt so good to have like all my pain be lower back and like legs and feet for obvious reasons. But it was just like nice to know that like how the environment can change things even though I was more physically active, like hiking six to eight hours a day and like that chronic tension was gone.

Yeah. 'cause you were probably enjoying that versus not enjoying your job as much on the daily or at all.

Right. Lauren, come back. Yeah. Sorry. Yes, sorry. I did. Yes, I was. Yeah. And it, I mean obviously I can't, like, I don't wanna hike forever, but it was like a good reset to come back into like my regular routine. Mm-hmm. Kind of honestly, it, it was a good reset because it got rid of my like diet coke addiction.

'cause I had like real coke in Spain with real sugar and then I came and had a really bad, uh, I thought it was a bad can of Diet Coke. So, so far I've been two weeks without it. Wow. And then just being like, I'm not so stressed at work anymore, even though I still take my job seriously. Like I don't have as much, um, anxiety.

Like, and if some certain like emergencies happen, I'm like, I'm capable. I can respond accordingly. I don't need to overanalyze and. Amazing. Yeah. Amazing. And that is, that is such an important part too. Like once you've experienced that, that the pain is gone, it reminds yourself that, oh, it is possible to live without that kind of pain or discomfort.

Some people have had some issues for so long, it's like there's not a life that exists outside of it anymore, and that makes it even more difficult to, uh, for them to believe it's even possible to get rid of it, so they kind of quit. So the fact that you remember, oh, it's actually possible to live without that.

At some point it comes back in your life, you're like, no, I'm not going back there. So let me do, let me adjust a few things to make sure I don't come, go back to that point. And I know it's possible 'cause I've experienced it recently. So that's a, that's a good point. And then you can use those tools like when you're at work.

Okay. If it's a, it's your shoulders, you said in your neck. So again, all the shoulds like, okay, what is really mine about my work? About my, what I'm supposed to do, what my job is, what actually falls on my shoulders? What is really mine? And all the stuff that is not really mine. You, you give them back to who it belongs.

So that's a way to take some weight off your own shoulders and be like, no, this is not mine. This is your department, this is your thing. And then you don't take O on more than you should or. Okay. Four minutes left. Anyone else? Everyone could go if you want or if Danielle or Jackie have another question you can come back to.

I have a question. I, I have struggled with sleep, like, for the majority of my life. Um, okay. Any, like since childhood? Probably since my twenties. Okay. Like early twenties. Um, any suggestions? Um, yeah. Um, how is your room? Is it like a temperature that's not too high? You have a, a good, comfortable bed? Do you, is it dark in it?

Yeah. And like, well, um, I, I also had found out like, it's not good to keep like a mirror across from your bed and a tv. Yeah. The, yeah. Yes. And I cover them now before I go to sleep. Yeah. Um, because I haven't like, but then more practical aspects of, of falling asleep. Like no screens, like one or two hours before you want you intend to go to sleep.

Yeah. That's a good one. Um, 'cause the blue light keeps us awake. Uh, so grabbing a book instead. A lot of people are like, oh, I can't read a book. I fall asleep right away. Good. Use that and fall asleep. Yeah. I can fall asleep. I just can't stay asleep. Oh, okay. So is that noise or is it like anxiety waking you up?

Um, I think it might be like hormonal stuff like cortisol, I'm not sure, but mm-hmm. I mean, I've struggled with it for so long, like it's just this thing where I like constantly and I get acupuncture done, so I know that Chinese clock, you know what I mean? And it's usually between like either hours one through three, which I know is associated with liver.

And then the, um, three to five is lungs, which is grief. Yeah. So I'm not, I I mean I've been working on a lot of stuff for a while, so I just, yeah. Yeah. And I, I feel you, I had chronic insomnia like my, the first 20, 20 ish years of my life, so I know how it, it, it drives us mad. Um, but yeah, little tricks can be, do, do you have a meditation practice?

You know, it was funny, I was writing that down. Like I used to meditate pretty regularly and I don't anymore, so I'm gonna try to start enforcing that as like a more structured routine. Yeah. And also your exercise routine. Do you work out, do you play sports? Mm-hmm. I, I just got in from a workout actually, so.

Okay. Yeah. I usually like walk or go to the gym. Um, yeah. I, I, I remember our session. I remember how you're, you're, you're already doing a lot of things right? Actually, you already know a lot about it and you, um, so yeah. It still hasn't resolved, eh. No. That's why I'm like, any, any other suggestions? Yeah, no, I remember.

It's good. Um, did you look into your chronotype 'cause for, for everybody, the chronotype is actually your sleep type. So most people are, you know better when you go to bed before 11 and you wake up around between six and eight. But some people are actual night owls and some people are more like, uh, nappers.

And so it's just, there's some tests you can do online to figure out what is your sleep type and then you optimize that. Okay. So if you're someone who's actually, uh, a night owl, like for you to have a normal nine to five schedule doesn't work. 'cause you have to wake up too early. But if you're able to do the same work, if you're able to have a boss or a work environment that allows you to start, for example, at 11 or 12 and you finish later, but the point is to do the job right.

Um, that's a good thing about today. We can reinvent, uh, work structures when people are open to it. Um, but yeah, some people had a hard time doing their job 'cause they're always tired. 'cause their chronotype, they should get up later during the day. Once they adjust that, suddenly they're perfectly functional.

So that's really good. Actually, as a teacher, I can't, you know, I don't have that, you know. Oh. But I'm looking into other things, so I'm hoping to retire soon, sooner than later. Okay. Thank you. You are welcome. All right, so it's eight 40. It's been an hour, man, I, I know I went through this fast. You'll also get the recording, so if you wanna listen to it again, I really wanted to make sure to give you the most material possible and cover all the things.

If ever things are unclear, uh, you can send me an email. I love to talk about this stuff. Um, so yeah, if, and yeah, do your homework. Um, it's really good tools to apply. Like, it's, it, it is, it's good to come back to that when you, you're feeling off somewhere and come back to this. Okay, how is my food, uh, relationship right now?

My sleep, my stress management? Then you, you can have a clear, like, oh, I need to adjust this. Okay, cool. Do I need to bring more structure or more flow here? And the, these questions, simple questions can really, like, instead of staying in a rut for too long, or staying stuck for too long, you can, uh, pivot and readjust, uh, faster.

All right, so thanks a lot everyone for having me here tonight. It was great to be with you. Thank you. And, uh, I look forward to, uh, I think I've met almost everyone one-on-one, but, um, I know Danielle, I'm gonna see you again and whoever I haven't met yet, I look forward to meet you. Have a good night, guys.

Thank you. Thank you.
