Nightmare with Lilly Video Transcript:

Hi, how's it going? It is going great. Do you see me, hear me? Everything okay? I do on my end, yeah. Perfect. Let's wait a little longer. Someone else is coming again.

Okay.

So how is the mood today? How are you feeling? Are you ready for a nightmare class? I think so. Okay. Yeah. So for whoever doesn't know, I am Lily and I am a human design expert. And today we'll speak mainly about, uh, human design, uh, aspects, about the shadow aspects about your not sell. All of those stuff.

We'll combine it with some Pluto transits, which are again, part of your shadow. Uh, and uh, I'm also a psychologist, so I incorporate some of the psychology aspects there as well. And an NOP expert, uh, also, so this is about me. If you have any questions throughout the class, uh, don't hesitate to ask or write in the chat.

I'll make sure I go to everything that you have as a concern. Uh, and let me first tell you more about the nightmare. Actually, all of the dreams that you might be having are dreams that you have for a reason, and you're born to actually experience them. Whatever you dream about, it doesn't matter how big, small, positive or negative, uh, you are meant to live that experience.

However, the things that might stop that dream for happening is your shadow. And you might not even be aware that you have that shadow or those sabotaging aspects because you have done them for so, so long, and now they're just part of you. They're just part of your identity and your behavior as well.

And Pluto now, as I mentioned, will have it in the presentation. Pluto will make you face, again, some of those shadows aspects, and sometimes it may make them even worse. And now you have the option to dive there and actually heal those aspects without, you know, um, not without, sometimes it can have some difficult times.

You might have some difficult times there, but still it might be something very, very positive at the end. However, uh, I already mentioned that you don't see that shadow, but now you have the opportunity to see it when Pluto is coming and when you see it might be something that you have waited for so long and now you have the opportunity to finally change that aspect.

Or it might come with more challenges and more struggles, but either way it will be something that inevitably will lead to a better, more fulfilling life and a life that actually aligns you closer and closer to your dreams and actually make you live your dreams. Uh, so you have to integrate also your shadow to reclaim your power back.

You have to connect with that shadow. You have to see it, you have to fully live it, and then you can, um. Move further away from that shadow, which will no longer sabotage your life. And before we start with the Pluto and the human design centers, I would like you to reflect on what has caused you the most pain in the past.

You can even write it in the chat, or you can write it in your own notes, however you feel. Uh, but think about your past experiences, your relationships. For example, what happened in the past five years, or even 10 years. What were you struggling back then? What has caused you the most pain?

And think about the things that you're still struggling with. Are those the same or different themes? What is currently happening in your life that is still a struggle?

Is it a situation that is different or is it a situation that is similar?

And if it's similar, how it is similar and if it's different again, how it is different.

And if you have thought about it, if you have written it, we can continue with the topics. I already mentioned that we'll speak about the Pluto Transit for you. We'll cover also the male and female centers in human design. And the biggest part of today's presentation, we'll be the lessons and the gifts of your open and defined centers in human design.

Um, that part will be quite extensive and, uh, if you lose your focus or if you don't understand something there, please interrupt me and ask me. Sometimes it can be heavy. And before we start, I would like to ask you if you know. You are open and defined centers. Do you know actually which centers are open for you?

And of course, do you know when, where Pluto is transiting for you? We have only four of you today, so I hope you all know that actually is someone not aware of, of Pluto and open Centers. Do we have someone that doesn't know them?

Do you, do you mean what? I'm sorry. Did I cut someone off? Uh, no. No. Uh uh Do you know where Pluto is transiting for you right now? For example, we all speak about Aqua Aquarius. Do you know where Aquarius is? Aquarius? Yes. That's what I wanted to clarify. So yes, it's, it's transiting my sixth house. Perfect.

So you know it in your six house. This is what I'm looking for. I'm a little, still a little fuzzy on open or defined centers, but I'm, I'm getting there. So the open centers are the one that are white in your chart. Okay. Okay. Okay. Thank you. Perfect. Thank you for, for asking that question. Uh, so, okay. Uh, what did we do?

So those are the houses. I'll go through all of them, um, quickly. So you know, what themes are gonna be important for you in, uh, the, the upcoming years, whenever Aquarius will be transiting Pluto. So if you have Aquarius in your first house, which is the house of your identity. You will go through radical personal transformation with your appearance, your self-expression.

You might become a pioneer in advocating for human rights and collective change, all of those stuff. If you have Aquarius in your second house, which is the house of money and wealth, you might shift in the way you earn money or how you make money. Uh, you might create more financial independence if you have it in the third house, which is the house of communication.

You might transform the way you speak or share ideas. You might become more innovative, uh, in the way you use ai or build more, more connections and pre prioritize intellectual growth or just in general speak in a more, um, in, in more collective, uh, ways. So the fourth house is the house of your home or where you feel at home.

So you might, um, change the foundations of your home or the way you relate to your home. You might release some traditional family dynamics or heal ancestral patterns and build more emotional security through, for example, innovation and collaboration. The fifth house is the house of romantic relationships, and you might also revolution revolutionize the way you experience joy and creativity.

And you might also channel creativity. And, um, you might embrace unconventional approaches to love because Aquarius is very different and strange. You might experience very strange romantic relationships, unconventional ones. The sixth house is the House of Health and also structured productivity. So you might adopt, uh, some systems which are more efficient or more, um, autonomous, like again, AI or those kinds of technological stuff.

In your, in your productivity. You might also explore biohacking or your health and more, uh, fitness routines, those beautiful things for your health. So the seven house is a house of committed relationships. So here you might transform, uh, your connections, uh, through more equality or build partnerships based on shared visions for the future.

And you might advocate more for freedom in relationship because the chorus is very connected with freedom. The eight house is the house of shared resources and shared power. So here you might gain more power by breaking taboos around debt, sex, or shared finances again. And uh, you also might explore cryptocurrency, fine tech, and futuristic investments.

Moving to the ninth house. If you have Aquarius here, you might change a lot your beliefs, and you might have, you might have more expansive beliefs and you might redefine education. Uh, you might travel more or explore other cultures. All of those things connected with the ninth house. The 10th house is the house of your, um, public, uh, image.

How you present yourself in the public, what you do, uh, outside in the collective. So you might become a public figure or, um, forward thinking. You might speak more in, um, the collective. Uh, so you might leave a legacy of progress and equality and again, futuristic thinking. The 11th house is the house of the collective itself.

So here you might revolutionize the collective itself. So you might become, again, a leader. You might become a human humanitarian. You might build communities that emphasize on collaboration and shared goals, and you can lead those communities. And the 12th, the 12th house is the house of your subconscious mind.

So here you will change your subconscious through technology. So you might heal even the collective through some unique and, um, different things that you created were not created before. Very innovative and different. So those are the Aquarius teams, and it's very important to know the theme of your, uh, transit right now because you can't connect it with the open centers because the open centers are also your shadow.

Which, for example, might make the theme of the aqua of the aquarium change right now more difficult. So for example, if you have your heart open, which is the center of money, and you have transit transiting, transiting your second house, it'll be very important to focus on how to, um, how to sustain your resources, not lose them.

How to, not just how to not, um, sabotage yourself. How to not, how not to, how to brand yourself in a way that is, um, allows your growth in those kinds of stuff. But we'll go into more depth, uh, later. Now, I will go quickly through the nine centers. I will tell you what is the theme of each one, and then I'll go into more depth of each and every center.

So we go from the first center on the top, which is the head. This is the center of inspiration. This is the center which answers the questions that you might be having. Then we have the Agile, which are our beliefs, perceptions. Then we have the throat, which is the voice and expression. Then we have the G center, the center of love and direction.

Then we have the heart, which I already mentioned, which is the center of self-worth and masculine energy. Then we have the spleen center, survival and wellbeing. Then we have the solar plexus, which is the emotions, our honesty. Then we have the Sacro center, which is our life force, energy and satisfaction.

Then we have the root, which is the pressure and anxiety and our connection with our roots and our ancestors. And here is a little summary of all the centers. I will go into more depth in each one, just in the next slides. But briefly, I would like you to see all of them, what are the key themes of all of them?

And see which teams do you recognize first, you know, which are the themes that grab your attention right now, which are the themes that are more open for you? We, you can go back to the first questions that I asked you in the beginning. What are you struggling right now? What are the themes that you struggled in the past and see in which center do they fall?

Uh, so the A center is the center that is connected with your beliefs. Um, and. What I did here, I don't know. Okay. So you might be trying to prove how educated you are or how smart you are or how strong your beliefs are, uh, but you might also have a lot of uncertainty, doubt, overthinking. And you have to be very careful how you handle those.

So your throat is connected with your voice and sometimes you might be, um, seeing too much or wanting your voice to be heard. You might be trying too hard to be heard. You might sometimes feel ignored or you might be scared to speak because you think that no one will listen what you have to say. You might be expressing in a way that sometime may be violent or sometime maybe too, you know, shallow, um, anything connected with your self-expression.

The G center, the center of your identity. Uh, here you might struggle with self-esteem issues, feeling unlovable lost. You might not have any self-love. You might not even know who you are. You might be bad at self-care. Uh, you might lose yourself in relationships because you merge with the other and you might not know who you are without the other.

You might take other people's identities as well with the next center, the ego center. Here you might struggle with willpower or low or no self worth. You might be undervaluing yourself under charging for your business, uh, giving things away for free. Always needing to prove yourself, feeling inadequate.

You know those people pleasers that will just do anything to please you. You might have a lot of difficulty with boundaries. You might be, you might be. Those are the things that probably most people struggle with, you know, saying No. Actually, the Heart Center, the ego Center, and the emotional center are the two centers that people struggle the most.

Those are the two that are the hardest to death condition. I haven't met anyone who doesn't have problems with those two centers, so I would focus the most on them. So here you might be trying to, to please others, just, um, just so they can approve of you. Sorry. Uh, so the emotional center, uh, here you might be a huge empath, thinking always about other people's emotions and taking them as your own.

Uh, no emotional boundaries. You might be conflict avoidant or avoiding the fruit, you know, putting things under the rug, ignoring your own feelings as well. And that could also make you not vulnerable or inadequate when showing your emotions. But we'll go in more depth here. So the root center might struggle with relaxing.

You might overburden yourself with tasks. You might have a lot of, um, anxiety and stress, and you might set unrealistic, high goals. You might feel like there is never enough time, always in a rush, always hurrying, feeling pressure to do everything at once, and sometimes freezing because you have so many things to do.

Then we have the PLE center. You might. Have a lot of fears about life because generally fears are in the spleen center and whenever we speak about fears, we have to look in the spleen center. And here is the DNA. So that's why you might struggle with, um, for example, sensitive immune system or addictions or, uh, hoarding or not being able to let go of things.

Again, lack of boundaries. But in terms of what is healthy for you, you know, doing things that are unhealthy for you, either sticking to relationships that are unhealthy or doing things that are just, um, you know, harming also co-dependencies here as well. So if you struggle with codependency, we have to look at this plain center.

Then we have the sacral center, so you. Can burned out easily, not knowing when enough is enough, not knowing your limits, pushing your body too far, and that in turn can make you tired, um, and also eating more or less than you should. So the Cent Center is responsible for that life force energy. And lastly, we have the head center, which is the center that can make you, uh, feel a lot of mental pressure, trying to answer other people's questions, solving other people's problems.

You know, you can have a lot of confusion or disconnection, uh, because of that doubt, mental overload, all of those things. And now I would like to explain to you the basis of energetic exchange. So whenever you have an open center, that center doesn't carry any energy for you. So you don't have energy in that center, but you magnify the energy that you get in that center.

For example, you might have, uh, your emotions open and you don't have your own emotions, but when you are with other people, you amplify and magnify their emotions. That's why you might be highly empathetic, and also you might feel responsible for how the people around you feel. That's why, that's why you might be become a people pleaser, because whenever someone feels a discomfort, you feel responsible for changing that discomfort because whenever that person finally feels okay, you feel okay because you feel that connection and that magnifying power that you possess.

That's why it's very important to have boundaries in all of your open centers because. It can sometimes manipulate you because whenever you have openness, you are more vulnerable, you're more sensitive to other people, you know, changing your path. So for example, when the people around you know that they can put, manipulate you with their emotions, you are an easy target.

So for example, your husband might become angry at you. Anytime he's angry. He knows that, okay, you do whatever he wants and you don't have a boundary there because you feel responsible for his anger. Uh, that's it for the open centers. I would like to tell you also, which are the feminine centers and the masculine centers.

Um, the feminine centers are the emotions, the sacral, the G, the why. It's important to know it because whenever we speak about relationships, we look at those centers. Specifically. However, I think both feminine and masculine are important because relationships are a combination of the two energies, but whenever we speak about work and career, we look more into the roots playing ego and throat.

That's it for now, and we start with the solar plexus. I, I'm not sure I see the chat, so if you have any question, please raise your hand and ask me if I'm going too fast if I'm not explaining something. Yes. Yeah. I had a quick question for the, for the head and crown center. Mm-hmm. Was that considered feminine or masculine?

The head is a center that doesn't have any. Oh, neither. Yes. It's a, it's a center that is, um, connected to the divine and that's why it does not have, oh, okay. Cool. Thank you about that question. Uh, wait, why? I don't see the chat anyway.

Excuse me. So the solar plexus, who the, let's read the hands, uh, the people that have the emotional center open.

So Jack, you're the only one that has the emotion, their emotions open. So you're the only one that needs to learn how to be vulnerable and honest. Mm-hmm. Do you struggle with actually seeing how you feel? Yeah. Well I have in the past, like I still struggle with it, but I know I've gotten better at it, but I've.

I've been aware of that before ever knowing about any of this stuff. So it makes sense. So you're actively working on actually speaking up whenever something's going on and just sharing how, how you feel. Yeah. Um, yeah. I, I, I grew up in a Catholic family, so, you know, just the traditional, put it down, don't worry about it kind of thing.

You put things under the direct and you forget about it. Right, exactly. It's, it doesn't matter. It's okay, whatever. Um, and so I always, I always saw it as like a weakness to be vulnerable. Like I had to be, I had to be the rock. Like I couldn't express those kind of things. Um, but now as I've been learning, like there's power in that.

A lot of power because if you don't express, I don't know if you have recognized that power, you just bottle up things until you explode. And the connection just is, is lost there. Right. And just having the, just the stress living inside you, and then you just blow up at somebody and it's like, oh, well I wish you would've just told me.

Yeah. And that's why men are conditioned in that way. And that's why also men are the loneliest people and also the most depressed people. Because whenever you hide your emotions, you just literally are disconnecting with yourself, which again, doesn't allow you to connect with others. And this is how the sense of loneliness is created.

Hmm. So that's why for you it's very, very important. Important for you and for others to keep, you know, your relationships. Stable, strong. To express yourself and how you express yourself is, you know, in a form of, I feel this right now. For example, if you are with your, um, spouse in the car, you just say, I am feeling some tension right now.

Not you are tense or You did this, that you did this, or, yeah, I feel some tension wrong right now. Or I feel some anger right now, or, I am a little bit sad knowing that cool, calm and collected way, but still, you know, trying to focus on yourself. Yeah. It doesn't give you a right to be a jerk, but yeah, you have to, you know, at least get, get behind your feelings, you know, own them, share them, express them.

And when it comes to the fine emotions, probably all of you, the rest of you, uh, Danielle, Jacqueline, and Carlos, you're probably with the fine emotions. So you need to learn to take responsibility of your feelings and feel them, uh, before speaking with others, before expressing them to others because there is no truth in the moment for you.

Whenever you have an emotion, it doesn't matter what's the emotion. It might be positive, it might be negative, doesn't matter what's the emotion. There is no truth in the moment for you. So whenever you experience the emotion, you allow it to flow through your body, then the awareness comes and then you can speak with someone else.

Uh, what it will happen if you try to express the emotion when you're having it, the other person will just close off. So for example, if you're sad. And you're deeply hurt. If you are trying to speak from that hurt with your partner, they will just be numb. They won't hear someone wrote in the chat. Let me see.

Yeah. Uh, Jacqueline, I know how difficult it might be. I know how hard it's sometimes to, you know, to try to regulate your emotions, but it's a game changer and it allows relationships to grow so much more because the vulnerability that you might have after that, whenever you have a conversation, after you have experienced the emotion is incredible.

Uh, and usually what might happen for you when you have an emotion, you just want to offload it on someone else. So you don't feel the pressure. But if you offload it on someone else, then the clarity won't come for you and. That's the disconnect again for you. What can happen here? I have an exercise, so the journaling will have help both, but it will help mostly the defined emotions because if you have an emotion and you try to express it by journaling or on your phone, you know, you can write an angry note or you can ride your pain or your hurt on your phone and you can write as much as you need, then that will just take the energy off and then you will have the clarity or you can just go punch something or cry your eyes out or screaming The cart sport is very important here, so whenever you go to the sport, you sweat.

That's how you lose the, the neurotransmitters that are released whenever you have an emotion. So, uh, walking, talking, uh, all of those things can help to move your emotions. Hmm. Let's see. Okay, we go to the next center. We'll have a breakout room after the G center. So you might discuss between, uh, between who's here, how you experience the topics of your open centers, and, uh, uh, what is transiting for you right now.

Where is pro to transiting for you right now, and how are you basically dealing with those, uh, topics so you can exchange some valuable, uh, insights and information. So the next center, which is the hardest center to the condition, uh, you have to, it doesn't matter if you have it defined or open, you have to learn your self worth and your value.

Whenever you have your open, uh, ego, it's even harder. To basically learn how valuable you are. But you'll learn that by saying no, setting boundaries, and just literally not being scared and not being afraid to be difficult. And, um, just make some people mad and angry that will help you with your self-worth.

And think about your resources. Where are you allocating your resources? How are you allocating your resources? Your resources are your time, your skills, your kindness. Um, basically anything that you have, your beauty, your, um, your contacts. The people that you know, anything in your life is a resource. How are you allocating your resources?

What are you doing with your resources? Are you pouring them into things that are fruitful or are you pouring them into things that doesn't do anything for you? Don't do anything for you. And that's how you can, you know, change your behavior and change the things that you're doing. When you have your ego, uh, defined, you might be better at, you know, knowing your worth.

But you have to understand that sometimes you might be true controlling to controlling of yourself and to controlling of others. So the lesson here, or the defining English, is to learn to let go of the control. Be more open to sharing your resources. Be more open to, um. You know, allocating your resources to spaces that you know you might not usually do.

And the exercise here, that is my, my top exercise, I love it, uh, is to make promise and stick to it for 40 days because that will spark your willpower. And whenever you stick to a promise for 40 days, you say to yourself, I'm gonna show up for myself. No matter what's going on, no matter if I want it or if I don't want it, no matter if my day was a bad day, no matter if I woke up cranky today, I will show up for myself.

And if you do that for 40 days, you rewire your brain and you rewire the way that you feel about yourself because, you know, oh, for example, Jacqueline is someone that I can trust and I will continue, um, continue standing up for myself in situations that I wasn't before. You'll be more confident when you speak with others, or in general, you will see how other people behave differently towards you.

It's a very beautiful change. I have experienced it many times and with many people. It's very, very beautiful. The next center is the Sacro Center, the Life Force Energy Feminine Center. And if you have it open, uh, you need to learn where are your limits. You have to be very careful with indulging in anything, work, food, sleep, sex, whatever it is, any deviation from the balance will make you feel sick.

At some point, you might burn out, you might have stomach problems. Anything that is not in balance will damage you and how you feel as well. And if you have the sacral defined, you need to be very careful how things make you feel. How, how a certain activity makes you feel, how your job makes you feel.

Because for you, it's very important to focus on pleasure and satisfaction. That comes after you do something. For example, if someone asks you to go to the cinema, you can envision going to that, that cinema and see what's going on in your body. You can envision yourself doing a certain type of work, and you might, you know, acknowledge how your body is feeling while you see that.

Or you might envision yourself meeting someone and see how your body feels. Because for the defined sacral, it's all about what you do and how it makes you feel. And for the sacral, it's also very important to feel satisfaction and pleasure. If you don't feel satisfied from the things that you do, you are moving further away from yourself and again, from your dreams, because all of those topics are connected with who you should be in order for your dreams to be manifested, to be created in the way that you, you feel them are, are, are destined for you.

And now, uh, any questions so far? Someone wanting to ask anything? Um, quick question on the sacral center. Mm-hmm. So when you talked about define sacral, it was learning to be active and engaging in physical activities. Is that just like a mixture of like, creativity and, um, exercise? Anything? Yeah, creativity, exercise, work, any, anything that is connected with action.

Oh, okay. Just wanted to check. Thank you. Thank you so much. Anyone else? Something else? Okay. Moving to the G Center again, feminine center. Uh, the open G might lose their identity and completely mirror the person that they are with. It might not be in a romantic way. It might be just you meet a friend and that friend is, um, for example.

For example, what is that friend? It's a person that does arts, and whenever you're with them, you become a little bit more artsy. You start speaking more about art, and you meet someone who is a more sporty person. Then you become a person that suddenly is excited about jogging and going to the mountain.

Then you meet someone that is very strict, very organized, and you suddenly become very strict and very organized. You just mirror the people that you're with. You're just like a mirror. But that might make you feel like you don't know who you are, and that's why you might struggle with loving yourself and loving your identity.

Uh, and the lesson here is to just learn to accept love and guidance from others because your guidance comes from external sources. The love for you comes from the world. That's why it's very, very important to learn how to ask for help and ask for guidance. Who is with an open G Here?

You can raise your hands if you know if your G is open. No one with an open G. Interesting. I am the only one with an open G. It was Ah. Okay. Danielle, you're with an open G. Um, so, uh, Danielle, you have to really, really learn how to. Be open to receiving anything that you want. Whenever you want something, you just have to say out loud.

For example, you're searching for a specific, um, specific service and you don't know how to find that service. Service. You just go out and start sharing it with your friends. Someone will give you the exact place or person that will be able to give you the best service that you're looking for. Or for example, if you don't know what to do with your life right now, you have to go to someone else and ask for guidance.

And the guidance that you need will come to you from places that you have not even expected. For example, it might be a song, it might be a person that you haven't met from a long time. It can be from any, any place, or anyone. So that's about the open Gs. The rest of you that have the G defined, you just need to learn how to allow others to be themselves and to have their unique path.

Whenever you see someone, for example, struggling first, make sure that that person wants to receive your help and your guidance. By asking them questions, do you need some help? And if that person says no, you just allow them to, you know, do the thing that you're doing. An exercise here for both centers, uh, is meditation.

Meditation allows you to connect with yourself to remove all of those energies that are external and that are not your own change. Exploration also allows you to connect deeply with who you are, what sparks you, what doesn't spark you. And again, this thing asking for help and guidance is specifically about your open G.

Uh, and now we can do the breakout rooms. Let me see how, how do you feel so far? Do you like it? You do. Do you have any difficulty with understanding what we're speaking about?

Let me see how I can do the breakout. Okay. Okay.

You can go to the rules.

Hello everyone. How are you feeling after your discussions?

Good. Good. Some insights that you would like to share. Some cool things that you discovered. I think Pluto is kind of seen as this really scary planet, but really when you go through the motions of that house, you find a lot of empowerment. There's obviously some destruction that happens, but it's for to build better, like you have those tower moments.

So I was, um, explaining about how it came out. When I came outta my 11th house, I joined all of these different collective groups, trying to feel a sense of belonging, but then just kind of realizing I don't need to belong in every space. I just need to belong in somewhere that feels right to my values, even if it's through a very small group of people.

So that's where it came from. Like these big corporations and connections I had to like this very small group out of it, but it feels a lot better. That's so beautiful, Jacqueline. Thank you for sharing it. And actually you are very, very right. I don't know why it has that notion that it's a scary planet for, for me, it's transiting through my fourth house, which is a house of your home.

I literally changed my home and it's the most beautiful home that I have. I haven't felt that that good in any place. I also have better relationships with my family, which is again, the home that I used to have. So it's, it's not a scary planet. It just pushes you to go where you will feel most aligned, where your two dreams are going to to be manifested.

Amazing. So we are moving with the next center, which is the spleen center. This is the center connected with your fears. Um, all of your instincts are also here. Your DNA, your immune system. So if you have the spleen open, ah, you need to learn to let go and detach. So before entering a relationship, you have to ask yourself, do I have any addictions?

Do I struggle with, um, codependency, or do I have some toxic patterns, or I have some toxic behaviors or. Literally where you are unhealthy, what is unhealthy in your life. And when you answer those questions, you might understand what you need to do in order to have more abundant life and a life where you feel more at peace.

Because whenever you have that toxicity in your life, it creates tension, which is the tension that pushes you to latch on things. It could be work, it could be a relationship, it could be a habit, it could be anything. Uh, so that's why it's so important for the screen to face their fears. So if you have your open spleen, write down your fears and check them one by one by facing them straight and directly as possible.

For example, if you have a fear of heights, you go to the highest floor or mountain and you face your fear. If you have fear of being alone, you stay alone for as long as possible until you no longer feel the fear. And if you have the fine spleen, ah, some you might be way too guarded because you define spleen remembers.

So you remember what hurt you in the past and you avoid it in all costs. So for example, if you know that you burned your head, uh, you burned your hand whenever you touched something that was too hot, you will avoid, um, those places in all costs. For example, if a relationship hurt you, you will avoid vulnerability, you will avoid relationships and.

It's very important to understand that you can rewrite your future by deciding to experience something different. Yes, what happened is, of course, something that taught you a lot of lessons, but you, you needed to go through those lessons so you know better how to distinguish what will be healthy and what will be not.

So, for example, you might look back in the past and say, okay, that relationship was very painful, but it was painful because I didn't recognize some things earlier. Now I can still enter a relationship. I will be cautious. I will be looking for those things that I missed in the previous one, but I will be brave enough to see what it happens, see how it goes.

I'm strong enough to go through the pain again if it happens, but I will look for those things that I have missed in the past. So an exercise here could be to remove one thing you cannot live without. For example, if you cannot live without your coffee, try to, uh, skip the coffee for at least 30 days. See what it happens, uh, if you cannot live, oh, without what I cannot think right now of something else, but you know what?

You cannot live without. I had a client that she couldn't live without her face mask that blinds, you know, uh, the light. And, um, that's one thing that you are addicted to. So think about the things that you're addicted to and remove one thing. Uh, and that will make you feel more calm after the addiction is gone.

Because the addiction, when you try to remove it, if you feel tension, but once it's gone, actually the relaxation comes. So that's a great exercise here. Uh, the root center is a masculine center and is a center connected with pressure. Anxiety. So if you have your open root, you need to learn how to slow down.

What I suggest to people here always is to try for a day at least, to walk slowly, talk slowly, breathe slowly, open the doors, slowly, just literally try to slow down everything you are doing and see what it creates in your body. Because usually people with an open mood, they're always in a hurry. Even if there's nothing that's going on in their life, they're, they just feel the pressure to, to be fast, to do things faster, like the next thing is coming.

They usually tie to their schedule so much. That is one thing after the other. It's always something going on in their lives. You have to learn to slow down. Do we have people with an open route here?

Jack, you're with an open root. Definitely learn to breathe. Breathing exercises, they nail you to breathing. Exercises are the best because when you slow down the breathing, your whole body slows down. And usually people with open root, they breathe very, their breath is shallow. You know, you don't breathe fully.

Your body is always tense. So breeding is very, very important. And grounding. Anything connected with grounding, stepping firmly on the ground, walking barefoot, uh, on the grass. Anything connected with grounding would be incredible. Uh, define root. New people are very good in stressful situations. Whenever there is a stressful situation, you can be the best at handling it because stress excites you and makes you act even better in those situations, but in a negative.

In the negative side, you might postpone for the last moment. Because of that, you might be struggling with time management. You might not very, you, you might just create sometimes pressure in your life to get active. Uh, you might, um, also struggle with, uh, how was it called? When you postpone too much, uh, things and you just have to push yourself on your own.

You have to make time to, to manage your tasks, to say to yourself, okay, right now I am going to be the one that kicks my ass. Not, you know, the, the deadline or my boss, or. My girlfriend who calls me and says, I'm waiting for you. Come on. And that's how you have to, you know, start to push that energy on your own.

Uh, and an exercise I already mentioned, working slowly, time management, those things can be very, very good. The throat center is the center of, uh, is a masculine center and is the center connected with your voice, your, um, self-expression, expressing yourself in general, your thoughts, your ideas, your emotions, everything connected with expressing yourself.

So if you have your throat open, you need to learn to communicate without the pressure to be seen and heard. And that will happen when you wait for the invitation. You wait for, for the other person to ask you a question or to see in their eyes that they're looking at you. That they, they, they, you have their full attention because whenever you have their full attention.

Then you will feel, okay, I'm now seen and hurt and understood. And you, you won't lose energy from your throat because you have very valuable energy there in your throat center. And you don't need to lose it. Your words are valuable. Everything that you have to say is valuable. So you have to say it only and only when it's appreciated and invited.

And whenever you have the throat center defined, you need to learn how to communicate, um, and express freely. Because sometimes you might hold your words and the people with open throat, they might feel the pressure to express your un expressed words, but that's an unhealthy dynamic. You have to be the one that expresses.

So for both centers, if you struggle with expression in general, I suggest, um. Many techniques here for the throat. We have many tech techniques. Also writing. I already mentioned it when we were speaking about the emotional center, but here again, just generally expressing everything that you have, uh, in your mind or in your body.

Just writing, journaling, anything that comes to, to, to you. Uh, you might sing, scream, laugh. You know, there is, there is a laughter exercise, which is a very funny exercise. You just start laughing without anything funny, just to, you know, try to get something out of your throat, which is very good. If you have problems with your thyroid, uh, ac actually any problem with the throat says that you have something, unset, some words that you have swallowed.

So if you have things that are swallowed, at least try to get 'em out by journaling or speaking with yourself or with a therapist. That's, that's a must.

Uh, any questions so far? Something about throat center? Okay, we go to the Aina Center, one of the last centers, so a feminine center. And if you have the aina open, you need to learn how to let other people have their own opinions. We doubt trying to impose your own. So you might struggle with, um, fighting and defending your point of view or the things that you believe in, but you are here.

To actually acknowledge other people's ideas. You're here to understand ideas and beliefs that are different than your own. If you have a different belief than the person that's sitting in front of you, you are winning because you have to be curious in understanding why this person thinks in that way.

And it's easy with people that you don't know, and it's difficult with people that are very close to you because whenever someone is very close to you, you would like them to think in the same way or view a situation in the same way. And I would suggest you to try this with your closest people. So for example, with your kids, with your partners, with your friends, whenever you have a conflict or you are trying to, you know, convince each other, uh, of something, you're trying to convince them for something.

Um. Try to reverse it. Try to see why they have this point of view, why they're thinking what they're thinking, why they have this, um, idea right now. And that will help you immensely. And if you have the financial, you have to revise your, um, your beliefs. You have to revise the things that you have as, um, patterns.

For example, the things that were told, uh, to you when you were a kid, the things that you saw in your, uh, the family that you were born in, because there might be some, there might be some beliefs that are stopping you from actually living an abundant life and actually having the life of your dreams. For example, sometimes people have beliefs that money or something bad or something that will bring them.

Loneliness or something that, um, will make them less empathetic, things like that. So an exercise here will be to challenge one belief that you have. For example, a challenge to challenge a belief is to find an example that is a different one. So for example, if you have the belief that relationships are painful, find an example that shows that a relationship can be the most beautiful thing in the world filled with love and, and joy and excitement.

And that's it about the, we go to the head center. So if you have the center, the head center open, you will want to answer other people's questions all of the time. So you have to stop doing that. So for example, when someone comes to you with a question. You don't answer that question, you just guide them with more questions.

Um, for example, you have a friend that has a difficult situation at work, and that friend comes to you and starts telling you, oh, I'm struggling with that colleague. I cannot have a pos uh, uh, a fruitful com, uh, communication there. What should I do? And you start asking them, what have you tried so far?

Have you tried this? What have you done in that situation? What's the character of that person that you're having a conflict with? What communication you're having so far? And through those questions, your friend will find their answer, literally like coaching, and you won't feel the mental pressure to give an answer.

And they will actually do the thing that they, they discover in that moment. Because if you give them a direct solution, they won't actually implement it. Or the chance for them implementing it is very low. So you have to leave them to find their own answers. You'll feel better. They will feel better.

Everyone is winning. No answering questions for the open head, so you sleep well at night. Uh, so if you have the head defined, you might have a lot of mental pressure that you need to just offload somewhere. You might be creating content, you might be writing articles, you might be writing a book. Anything that allows you to just offload that mental pressure you might be teaching anything that you know, uh, uses all of that gift and talent from your head to some external benefit.

And again, journaling. And as an exercise here as well, we went through all of the centers, we went through all of the 12 houses of Pluto, trusting Aquariuses. Um, this is the information about me. Thank you so much for being here. Do you have any last questions for me or things that you would like to share or some insights that you have on anything that's on your mind right now?

No, just thank you very much for your time. Mm-hmm. Thank you so much for being here. Uh, I hope it was useful for you. And if you have any more questions, you can always, you know, email me here, my emails, you can write me, ask me anything. And I think I will be having a session with everyone. And we'll be able to go into more depths of your design, any personal issues that you might be struggling, whatever.

Great. Cool. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Bye. Have a wonderful weekend today. Thank you. Bye.
